

ENEL GLOBAL TRADING CHALLENGE

“European Gas outlook: could we overcome the energetic war?”

During 2022, Europe has faced an unpredictable and unprecedented event that totally changed the geopolitical and energetic equilibrium. Russia’s invasion against Ukraine represented not only the trampling of human rights within European territory, but also the beginning of a new era without Russian gas supply. For the first time in the history, the energetic supplies have been exploited as a weapon against an entire continent. Europe has started to struggle against the scarcity of one of the main gas supply flow on which it has always counted on. How the gas supply and its mix changed over last year and how Europe reacted to the supply cut?

Given this intricate new scenario, do you think Europe could survive without Russian gas? If yes, what do you predict could be a new reasonable equilibrium price?
