EMBEDDED COSMOPOLITANISM
Duties to Strangers and Enemies in a World of 'Dislocated Communities'

by
Toni Erskine

A British Academy Postdoctoral Fellowship Monograph

Published for THE BRITISH ACADEMY
by OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Contents

List of figures

Acknowledgements

Introduction: Qualifying Cosmopolitanism?

1. Embedded Selves, Transnational Duties, and Distant Strangers
   - 1. Context, Particularity, and Normative IR Theory
   - 2. The Sphere of Equal Moral Standing
   - 3. The Account of the Moral Agent
   - 4. Ethical Particularism as Deficient, Derivative—or Distinct?
   - 5. The Limits of Ethical Particularism
   - 6. Categories of Communitarianism and Cosmopolitanism in Normative IR Theory
   - 7. An Alternative Perspective? ‘Embedded Cosmopolitanism’

2. Impartialist Cosmopolitanism
   - 1. ‘The Community of Human Beings in the Entire World’
   - 2. Impartiality and Moral Deliberation
   - 3. ‘Rawlsian’ Examples of Impartialist Cosmopolitanism
   - 4. ‘Citizens of Nowhere’: The Perceived Limits of Impartialist Cosmopolitanism
   - 5. Abstraction and Sensitivity to Context? Two Replies
   - 6. Impartialist Cosmopolitanism and the Moral Relevance of Borders

3. The Morally Constitutive State
   - 1. When ‘Community’ Means ‘State’
   - 2. State Borders and the Situated Self: The Ethic of Patriotism
   - 4. Constitutive Theory and Normative IR Theory’s Hegelian Influence
   - 5. Morally Constitutive Bonds of Citizenship? Shortcomings in a Non-ideal World
   - 6. Implications for Contemporary Normative IR Theory

4. Distinguishing State from Community: Michael Walzer’s Communitarian ‘View from the Cave’
   - 1. The Morally Constitutive Community and the Instrumental State
Contents

2. Walzer’s Communitarianism 121
3. Towards an Embedded Cosmopolitanism? Radical Particularism, Solidarity, and Criticism 132
4. Discrete Communities, Empathetic Attachments, and Universal Moments 144
5. The Limits of Walzer’s ‘View from the Cave’ 147

5. Remapping the Community: Feminist Ethics and the Challenge to ‘Communities of Place’ 150
   1. Communities with Indefinite Boundaries? 150
   2. Gilligan’s Embedded Moral Agent and the ‘Web of Ongoing Relationships’ 153
   3. A Challenge to ‘Communities of Place’ 161
   4. Towards a Theory of Embedded Cosmopolitanism 169
   5. The Situated Self at the ‘Point Where Circles Intersect’: The Limits to Inclusion 178

   1. Beyond Consensus and Affinity: The Challenge of War 181
   2. ‘The Enemy’, Norms of Restraint, and Assumptions of Moral Standing 186
   3. Duties to Enemies? The Problem of Inclusion and the Possibility of Restraint 199
   4. Towards a Radically Situated Alternative? The Enemy as ‘Someone Like Me’ 209
   5. Embedded Cosmopolitanism: The Enemy as a Fellow Member of Overlapping Communities 216
   6. Incompatible Communities and the Limits of Restraint 227
   7. Fostering Inclusion: Lessons from the ‘War on Terror’? 235

Conclusion 244

Bibliography 256
Index 273