Part VII – Research Activities

Keywords	Brief Description
Informative systems and Big Data	Since the beginning of her career, the candidate has always devoted a special attention to methodological issues with a particular focus on the Social Informative Systems, on the implementation of local Observatories, and on the strategies for collecting social data in an integrated way. Articles, research reports and invited interventions in conferences

Gender studies, against women, Sexual harassment at work, Central capabilities, Empowerment	The candidate has devoted the last 13 years to the study of violence against women, coordinating, and then directing, the Observatory of the District of Rome on “Women victims of violence and their children” in charge for the Solidea Institution. The candidate has written reports, books and articles on this topic focusing on intimate partner violence and sexual harassment at work. She is developing an in depth reflection on the impact of violence on the central capabilities identified by Martha Nussbaum, starting from the senian capabilities approach.
Housing policies, Social housing, co-housing, innovative intergenerational housing solutions, requalification and regeneration	During the last 10 years the candidate, observing the relevant effect of the economic crisis on the middle class, has also started to focus her studies on both the disregarded housing needs of individuals and families, and on the policies that could support an affordable access to housing solutions. In depth, studies have been carried out on innovative housing solutions (co-housing, intergenerational cohabitation). Even in this case the theoretical reflection looks at the senian approach of capabilities and to his concept of social justice.
Active ageing, healthy ageing,	The experience within the Urbact Programme has stimulated the candidate to orient her research interests towards a major in depth study of the impact of active ageing on society. The reflection has mainly focused on the identification of policy measures that could enforce and sustain a more active life in later ages, formulating recommendations for local policy makers. This phase has been characterized by the adoption of qualitative research methods (mixed methods approach); comparative demographic analysis have been accompanied by case studies and ethnography, in order to identify good practices. Finally yet importantly, this experience has enabled the candidate to develop cross-sectional competencies (soft skills) in project management, working group, decision making and problem solving.
Employment precariousness, delay in transition to adult life, family choices among young generations	One of the main topics focused in the research history of the candidate, concerns the employment precariousness and the consequences that a low and critical entry in the labour market can have on the life of youngster generations. The candidate has studied the consequences of barriers to employment with respect to the condition of: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a) women victim of violence (when they are looking for a job in order to conquest an independent life); b) individuals and families looking for a dwelling under some economic constraints (who cannot sustain the costs

Social inequalities, poverty conditions, policies measures to contrast poverty	The condition of women, elderly, young people, is facing at some challenging threats related to economic constraints that expose them to the risk of poverty. The study of poverty, of social inequalities, and more specifically, the policy measures adopted to contrast processes of social exclusion represent one of the field of study the candidate is focusing on in the last years.
imposed by the market); c) elderly people, who always more frequently represent fundamental children care givers in families encountering difficulties in balancing working and personal life. For this reason, this research topic is often considered
