Part VII – Research Activities

Keywords	Brief Description
Multivariate Statistics	The large majority of my research is mainly focused on the analysis and development of methodologies in the general context of classification and dimension reduction, with reference to both theoretical and computational issues.
Cluster Analysis
Model-based Clustering
Dimension Reduction Methodologies	Models are generally proposed in either a model-based or a least-squares framework and always presented together with efficient algorithms (using Matlab or R) for the application to artificial data and real cases. Extensive simulation studies to investigate the performance and the behavior under different experimental conditions are also always performed, even in terms of scalability and computational complexity.
Symmetric/Asymmetric Proximity data	In all papers, "simultaneous models" are proposed which jointly optimize a single loss function (for example concerning classification and/or dimension reduction and/or regression), with a substantial improvement in terms of performance over the application of sequential procedures which lead to sub-optimal solutions for the general problem. In several papers the presence of possible external variables has been also considered in a confirmatory approach. In particular, the topics of the publications, also in collaboration with Italian and foreign scholars, concern different theoretical fields: Three-way proximity data Most proposed methodologies are concerned with the analysis of three-way proximity data where pairwise similarities between objects are observed in different occasions/subjects. Models are proposed for clustering the objects in either a finite mixture or a least-squares framework. The heterogeneity is accounted for by deriving classes of similar occasions/subjects using different models. Multivariate Regression Multivariate regression models are presented to deal with heterogeneous data when either objects or predictors are clustered in a number of unknown groups in a dimension reduction perspective to handle multicollinearity. Distribution theory Some papers arise from the joint research with Prof. S. Kotz and R. vanDorp (George Washington University) on a family of bimodal distributions on bounded domain and on skewed continuous distributions. Asymmetric proximity data A recent chapter of research is entirely devoted to the development of methods and tools for clustering asymmetric proximity data (i.e., for example confusion data, flows, brand switching data). In such papers the novelty is the proposal of clustering models where the directions of the exchanges have been accounted for in addition to their average amounts. A monograph on this topic coauthored with prof. G. Bove (University of Roma Tre, Italy) and A. Okada (Tama University, Japan) has been just published (Springer Nature).
	Collaborations with people in both the same University and in other Italian or international Universities have been established and are currently active.

Part X – (Non-selected) List of Publications

The structure of this list is as follows: Authors, Title, Journal, First page, last page, Year. In brackets bibliometric information are reported, with citations taken from CitGS=Google Scholar (if applicable), CitS=Scopus (if applicable), Impact Factor from WOS for year 2020 (if applicable), Classe A for 13/D1.
