Part VII – Research Activities

Keywords	Brief Description
Psycho-sexology Psychological burden related to sexual dysfunctions Sexology and disability	Two are the principal research interests in the field of psychological and clinical sexology: the first research topic concerns the impact of sexual dysfunctions on the psychological and general patient's and couple well-being, with a particular attention to the study, from a bio-psycho-social point of view, and in association with a quantitative methodology (the use and the validation/standardization of new psychometric tools) of the variables worsening the quality of life and the mental health. Among these, particular attention is paid to the evaluation of psychological constructs bearing on sexual functioning, such as attachment styles, personality traits and emotional dysregulation. The second research topic concerns the relationship between sexuality and disability. In particular, the principal interest is focused on the study of problematic sexual behaviours towards people affected by disabilities. The main objective is to study, from a clinical point of view, unusual sexual interests of some people towards people affected by disabilities. In addition, a scientific interest is also related to the study of sexuality of people affected by intellectual disabilities, to develop specific educational programs. Future perspective will be also oriented towards the implementation of the scientific knowledge about the unusual sexual interests/paraphilic interests or behaviours/paraphilic disorders, also following the evolutionary perspective, trying to study childhood's sexuality associated with problematic behaviours, monitoring in a longitudinal way the associated risk factors in order to prevent the development of psycho-pathological conditions.
