Part VII – Research Activities

Keywords	Brief Description
Dermoscopy in vivo reflectance confocal microscopy optical coherence tomography ex vivo fluorescence confocal microscopy	Research mainly in the field of dermatology, non invasive diagnosis, cutaneous physiopathology, skin bio-engineering for the evaluation of inflammatory diseases, since 1995. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Melanoma and pigmented skin lesion diagnosis, early identification, pattern characterization, by means of dermoscopy, also in combination with system for image analysis and automated diagnosis 2. Melanoma and non-melanoma skin cancer in vivo reflectance confocal microscopy for the study of cytological and architectural aspects of the skin and of skin lesions, in correlation with dermoscopy and histopathology are the present and most relevant fields of research. Since 2003, his main research interest is in the field of in vivo confocal microscopy for the diagnosis and characterization mostly of skin cancer. 3. Laboratory research: melanoma features have been described and validated. Histopathology correlation, immuno-histochemistry for identification of bio-markers and genetics for characterization of familial syndromes and somatic mutations related with different tumor aspects and aggressiveness. 4. Application of new technologies integrated with other imaging modalities, including optical coherence tomography and speckle variance tomography for skin cancer and inflammatory skin diseases 5. Skin aging, dermo-cosmetology, pathophysiology of the skin. Study of the skin barrier and allergic/irritant dermatitis with the use of non-invasive technologies. 6. Drug efficacy, quality of life and metabolic syndrome in patients with psoriasis and other inflammatory skin diseases, with a focus on acne pathogenesis and treatment. 7. Ex-vivo fluorescence confocal microscopy for rapid histopathology in basal cell carcinoma, inflammatory skin diseases and other visceral cancers (including prostate cancer)
