The fear that dentists have regarding becoming infected by COVID-19 could be less if dentists and dental healthcare workers conscientiously follow the relevant recommendations. Looking ahead, it is necessary to increase research efforts in aerosol control during dental treatments, including improving engineering control in dental office design. The COVID-19 pandemic has exposed important gaps in the collective response of global healthcare systems to a public health emergency. Dentistry as an integral part of the health care system should be prepared to play an active role in the fight against future emerging life-threatening diseases.
